HE TURNED THE TABLES ON NAZI CHIEFS

WAR PRISONER'S ESCAPE—WITH NUREMBURG SEQUEL

"They Have Their Exits." By Airey Neave. Hodder and Stoughton: 12s 6d net.

WHEN Mr. A. M. S. Neave—Airey Neave he now calls himself — was the Conservative candidate for Ealing North in the 1951 general election, he impressed us all as a charming and courteous gentleman. And when his gallant effort fell short of victory by 120 votes, many of us regretted—politics apart—that it meant the loss to our locality of such a delightful personality. But Mr Neave did not tell us then what had previously happened to him. We knew he had been in the Army in the Second World War, had attained high rank and been decorated, and had taken some part in the war trials at Nuremburg. We did not know that he was a Ulysses returned from one of the more remarkable of modern odysseys.

This book now tells in book form—and it really is one of the best of war autibiographies—is as exciting as any thriller. It is, moreover, a story with a moral, in which fortune, after being traditionally unkind, is reversed to permit the triumph of a hero and the merited fate of villains in true fairy tale fashion.

Mr Neave—Eton, Oxford, and the Bar—became a Territorial officer before the war and in that capacity went to France in time for the 1940 debacle. He was wounded and taken prisoner by the Germans at Calais, but he was the type that prisons fail to hold. After two unsuccessful attempts at escape he got away from the supposedly impregnable fortress at Colditz, where the more "difficult" prisoners were detained. With great daring and a little luck he and a companion got across Germany, into Switzerland, and then home by the long trek through France, Spain and Gibraltar

Back to the Continent

He returned to the Continent with the 1944 invaders and distinguished himself in the search for lost and grounded Servicemen. But then comes the difference between his story and many similar ones. He was appointed aa official to the International Military Tribunal at Nuremburg, and in this capacity served their indictments on the top-ranking Nazis, taking with him into the cells of these broken men the memories of all the misery and humiliation he had suffered while a captive in German hands.

"As I looked at Keitel," he writes, "the strange reversal of fortune brought other memories. I had heard of Mike Sinclair, shot down as he tried to escape from the castle at Colditz, of the murders of Stalag Luft III, and the gallant gentleman in green beret shot without trial. It was this man sitting before me who had ordered these brutal murders."

Sir Norman Birkett, who writes a foreword to the book, says that Mr. Neave evinces a natural note of exultation that the mighty had been put down from their seats, but also a note of satisfaction that justice had overtaken evil men—that the mills of God did grind.

Pathos and humour

Besides this element of drama that transforms the personal story as it were into a novel, there is a wealth of excitement tempered with pathos and humour and very well written for one who is not a professional author. There are flashes of genuine comedy in addition. Mr Neave protests when officers and other ranks who have escaped together from death and peril have to be separated directly they reach British territory. And his comments with dry sarcasm that bureaucracy was not ready to deal with fugitives when he and his companion reached Gibraltar before it was a Saturday afternoon!

MERCY CABLE TO PRESIDENT EISENHOWER

Ealing Rosenberg appeal meeting

A Transatlantic cable was despatched from Ealing on Tuesday evening. It was addressed to President Eisenhower, White House, Washington, D.C., and asked for clemency for Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, the young American couple under sentence of death for alleged conspiracy to commit atomic espionage on behalf of Russia.

The cable went from a meeting at Ealing Town Hall, convened by the Rosenberg Clemency Appeal Committee. The meeting was told that the Rosenbergs, whose appeal was recently dismissed by the American Supreme Court and whom President Eisenhower has said he cannot reprieve, have been in custody since 1951. They have continually maintained their innocence.

Mr. Dudley Collard, barrister-at-law, described the judical proceedings. He pointed out that the evidence for the prosecution rested upon the statements of an alleged accomplice, Mrs. Rosenberg's brother who was not on good terms with his relatives and who had the possible motive of saving himself by blaming them. The appeal court had not been unanimous and had rather suggested that it might be unsafe for the [illegible] it been empowered to do so.

Mr. W. A. Whitbread, J.P. presided. The resolution to send the cable was proposed by the Rev. O. O. Fielding Clarke, Councillor J. Sherman appealed for contributions to a collection in aid of the cause

"Hole made in roof to enter shop"

YOUTH SENT FOR TRIAL

On a charge of being concerned with another man, not in custody, in breaking into a shop at 124, Uxbridge-road, West Ealing, on the night of March 16, and stealing two pairs of shoes, five pairs of socks and £2 cash, to a total value of £10 10s, belonging to W. J. Barratt and Co., Ltd., Joseph Benjamin Drake, 17-year-old homeless toffee-boiler, was sent for trial at Middlesex Sessions by Ealing magistrates on Wednesday. Two grocers' assistants stood behind Drake in the dock.

Mr. Leonard Stephens, manager of the shop, said that at 8.50 a.m. on March 17 he found the premises in disorder and the property mentioned in the charge was missing. The premises had been entered through a hole made in the roof, by the removal of slates, and a hole in the ceiling.

Det.-Sgt. Wallis said that on being arrested, Drake told him, "I will plead guilty." Witness took from him a pair of shoes and two pairs of socks that were wearing, and Drake later made an alleged statement.

Drake was ordered to be kept in custody pending his trial.

English teacher to Italian star

EALING GIRL WITH "BEAT THE DEVIL" TEAM

English teacher to Italian star Gina Lollobrigida, currently on location with Humphrey Bogart, Jennifer Jones, Robert Morley and Peter Lorre for John Huston's "Beat the Devil," in Ravello, Southern Italy, is petite, golden-haired 23-year-old British Hazel Meadows. Six months ago she graduated with an honours degree in French from Nottingham and Strassburg Universities, and returned to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Meadows, of The Park, Ealing.

She learned from a friend that Signora Gina Lollobrigida wanted someone with a knowledge of languages to teach her English. Although she had no interest in films, Hazel applied for and secured the position. Now she goes to the pictures five times a week when Gina is not making a film because the Italian star considers it an essential part of her job to see as many films as possible.

Hazel says she could live in Italy happily enjoying the climate, good food, and living conditions, although she does very much miss the London theatre—Rome offers little but revues.

Ealing Arts Club

Last Saturday the Amenity Group of the club arranged an interesting evening at St. Andrew's Hall, Mount Park-road. It consisted of two talks. The first of these was given by Mr. Buchanan under the title "Trees."

In the course of his address the speaker said he considered that Ealing was most fortunate in possessing so many open spaces and in these were to be found trees of great variety and some of an unusual type. The talk was of a technical nature and it was apparent that the speaker was well versed in the subject. He concluded by reading an extract from a work by Washington Irving entitled "Forest Trees."

The second talk, by Mr. Joplin Stephenson, was entitled "English Furniture of the 18th Century," illustrated by lantern slides. Mr. Stephenson gave an interesting treatise on this subject, of which he has an extensive knowledge. The slides were in accordance with the many illustrations of 18th Century Hepplewhite and Chippendale chairs and also of other specimens of furniture of the period.

Mr. Spark, in the chair, thanked the speakers for their services.

North Ealing Parent-Teacher concert

There was a large audience in the school hall on Tuesday evening for a concert presented by members of the North Ealing Parent-Teacher Association

The evening began with "Parents in Harmony" a selection of popular tunes sung by the parents' choir. The harmonies achieved were a tribute to Mrs. M. Buck, who had arranged and produced the item. Mrs. Brierly was at the piano.

A past pupil, Christine Hughes, entertained the audience with her dancing

The dramatic talents of members were fully shown in a one-act play "Five Birds in a Cage," by Gertrude Jennings.

During an interval members and friends enjoyed the home-made refreshments which had been prepared by the ladies committee under the leadership of Mrs Kendall, social secretary.

The second half of the entertainment opened with another one-act play "Orange Blossom," by Philip Johnson.

Both plays were produced by Mr. L. Brewer and the stage management was greatly to the credit of Mr. F. Brown.

The audience was delighted by the minstrel item which followed, Mr. Vic Capel and two friends of the Associa tion Mr. Blandford and Mr. A. Wilby in true minstrel dress and make-up, gave pleasure by their songs and humour. Their pianist was Mr D. Lambert.

Miss M. Long, the Association's chairman, in her speech of thanks paid tribute to all who had helped in any way in the success of the evening.

Under cross-examination at the London Fares Inquiry, the Chief Financial officer of the London Transport Executive said that the total fuel bill for London's buses was £6,300,000 of which £4,650,000 was duty on fuel oil. In addition, vehicle licence duty amounted to £804,000. The average tax on a diesel-oil bus was £725 a year.

At this time of year when Spring is in the air it is always a temptation to introduce something new in the Home.
